

David Abbasi, Siyavash Awesta, has been placed under the protection of the French police multiple times. Four specialized officers from the Ministry have guarded him with an armored vehicle.

David Abbasi, also as "Siyavash Awesta," began writing for magazines and newspapers such as Caricature, Khorasan, Nabard-ma, Aftab Shargh, and Mardom at the age of 14. He published his first book, The Ridicule of Our City, at the age of 16.

The newspaper Ershad was published under his leadership and editorial direction in 1979, making him the youngest founder, editor-in-chief, and director of a newspaper in the world at that time.

After a year, Ershad was banned for publishing critical articles about the Islamic Revolution, opposing religious fundamentalism, and advocating for a democratic and secular society.

Although the publication was officially banned, it continued to be printed and distributed secretly for another year. However, in 1981, Islamists attacked the newspaper's office and his home, arresting and executing many young people, colleagues, and supporters of Siyavash Awesta. This forced David to flee his country.

Tens of thousands of people have fallen victim to the repressive Ayatollah regime from the 1980s to the present day, including Siyavash Awesta's father and many of his supporters.

In 1982, he settled in Paris, France, while continuing his work as a writer and journalist.

To this day, Siyavash Awesta has written more than 140 books and thousands of articles in different languages, and he has produced over seven thousand radio and television programs. Even today, he does not feel safe in France and is regularly attacked by extremists and religious fundamentalists.

Upon reviewing the attached documents, we can see that from 1985 to the present day, in 2025, these threats, physical and verbal attacks, and raids on the radio and television studios and offices of "David Abbasi" Siyavash Awesta have continued.

Over the years, Awesta has filed dozens of complaints with the police. Despite photographic and video evidence, as well as individual testimonies, and despite taking his cases to the courts of Paris multiple times, there have been no significant results.

David Abbasi, Siyavash Awesta, has been placed under the protection of the French police multiple times. Four specialized officers from the Ministry have guarded him with an armored vehicle.

However, Awesta has always urged the French government to ask the Islamic State, with which it maintains strong political and economic ties, to stop sending terrorists to France, rather than simply providing him with bodyguards, which would only restrict his activities. Unfortunately, over the past forty years, around forty Persian intellectuals, as well as many French citizens, have fallen victim to Islamist terrorism.

If you ask artificial intelligence (AI) to introduce «David Abbasi Siyavash Awesta» in a few lines, it will respond like this:

David Abbasi « Siyavash Awesta »: A Committed and Visionary Intellectual. David Abbasi, a Persian-born writer, journalist, historian, and philosopher, is a prominent figure in the Franco-Persian intellectual and cultural landscape. Based in Paris for several decades, he has established himself as a fervent advocate of secularism, human rights, and freedom of expression.

An Exceptional Journey

Coming from an intellectual lineage with a history spanning seven thousand years, David Abbasi embraced culture and knowledge from an early age. As a teenager, he became involved in journalism and newspaper editing. His free and critical spirit led him to oppose religious extremism and dictatorship, which ultimately forced him to leave his homeland after the Islamic Revolution of 1979.

Following his exile, he pursued historical studies in Beirut and Damascus, where he also mastered the Arabic language. Later, he settled in Paris and founded the Awesta Institute, a cultural center located on the Champs-Élysées, dedicated to promoting Persian and European civilizations and spreading secular and humanist thought.

A Prolific Author and Journalist

David Abbasi is the author of over 140 books, covering diverse topics such as the history of civilizations, philosophy, politics, secularism, and spirituality. He has also published articles and directed several newspapers, including Erchad, Étoile, Homa, and Shahr Farang, all registered at the National Library of France. As a journalist and political analyst, he has collaborated with numerous television and radio networks, regularly commenting on topics related to the Middle East, Islam, and global geopolitics. He has also been one of the main programmers for 95.2 FM "Ici et Maintenant," RadioParis.net, and the Persian radio station Ava Iran.

A Man of Innovation and Entrepreneurship

Beyond his intellectual pursuits, David Abbasi has made a name for himself in the business world. He has founded several successful enterprises, along with renowned restaurants in Paris, including:

- Persépolis, Assiette Impériale, Chez Esther, Club Bonaparte

He has also been a pioneer in the fields of information technology and media, creating fax services and computer-assisted publishing solutions.

International Recognition

His commitment to culture, secularism, and peace has earned him multiple honorary distinctions awarded by the French Senate, Parliament, and the Human Rights Center. Among his many accolades, the most notable include:

- Mérite et Dévouement Français (2003), Arts-Sciences-Lettres (2004 - Gold Plate, 2007 - Vermeil Medal, 2011 - Gold Medal), sGrand Prix Humanitaire de France (2007 - Gold Medal)

A Fight for Freedom of Thought

David Abbasi tirelessly advocates for a world based on tolerance, free thought, and cultural respect. Through his books, conferences, and media appearances, he relentlessly fights against extremism and obscurantism, highlighting the richness of Persian civilization and its contributions to humanity.

His progressive vision and commitment to intercultural dialogue make him an influential figure, whose work continues to inspire and foster reflection on contemporary global issues.

The Creation of a Doppelgänger Named ABBASI by the Ayatollahs.

Since 1980, the Iranian mullahs have constantly tried to falsify David Abbasi's work and identity.

A fake character named Dr. Abbasi was created in Iran to harm David Abbasi in France. The well-organized and globally infiltrated new fundamentalism has launched, through the media in Los Angeles, a general of the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps (IRGC), who is the trainer of the Lebanese Hezbollah, under the false name of Abbasi. The aim is to deceive global public opinion against the secular Franco-Persian writer and philosopher, David Abbasi. David Abbasi, a secular humanist, has been waging a tireless and immense battle since the age of 14. As an inventor and creator of secular, innovative, and rational ideas, he has influenced the world through his writings and his radio and television programs in French, Persian, Arabic, English, Kurdish, and Turkish. His secular engagement has reached people worldwide, including, of course, his enemies—Islamists and fundamentalists, as well as Islamist Marxists, now known as the "Caviar Left," who represent another side of political Islam seeking to dominate Judeo-Christian societies.

The origins of these ideas go back to 1980s Iran and the Islamic Revolution, which was supported by all Islamist movements, the clergy, and the Ayatollahs, along with 30,000 Shiite mosques and the armed movement of clerics, whom the Shah of Iran referred to as "Islamist Marxists." Their slogan during the early years of Khomeini's Islamic Revolution was: "The total destruction of imperialism and Israel." This slogan was prominently displayed on the front pages of their newspapers. As a passionate secular philosopher and thinker, David Abbasi has consistently challenged these anti-Western movements and criticized any politicization of Islam. Consequently, he has always been a target of fundamentalists from all backgrounds. According to Iranian Supreme Leader Ali Khamenei, his political Islam influences the entire world, affecting Shiites, Islamist Marxists, and other Islamist movements that claim to oppose the Ayatollahs' regime while spending millions of dollars to counter David Abbasi's secular ideas. David Abbasi has been the target of physical attacks, propaganda, and slanderous accusations since the 1980s, when his newspaper Erchad was banned by the Ayatollahs and condemned by the Revolutionary Courts. His father was assassinated, and his family was arrested. Since arriving in France in 1983, each of his book publications has provoked attacks, including one in 1986 by an associate of Ali Khamenei. The Creation of a Fake Individual Named Dr. ABBASI

A major anti-David Abbasi act was the fabrication of a doppelgänger named Dr. Abbasi—an Iranian terrorist general claiming to be the trainer of Lebanese Shiite terrorists. His real name was Yadollah Ghazvini, but he adopted the alias Dr. Hassan Abbasi, delivering violent anti-Western speeches to deceive and tarnish the reputation of David Abbasi, who resides in Paris.

This highly significant and extremely serious attack against David Hassan Abbasi involved the creation of this false figure, Dr. Hassan Abbasi, whose real name was Yadollah Ghazvini—a terrorist general of the Iranian Revolutionary Guard Corps, claiming to be an educator of Lebanese Shiite terrorists. The creation of this fake character under the name Dr. Abbasi, along with the investment of millions of dollars to make this figure famous as a staunch defender of Islamic terrorism, Hezbollah, and the Iranian regime, was intended to mislead the public into believing that the terrorist Dr. Abbasi in Iran was the same Abbasi from Paris. Everyone fell into this trap and confused David Abbasi—the philosopher, secularist, and freedom fighter living in Paris—with Abbasi, the terrorist general of the Revolutionary Guards and advisor to the Iranian Supreme Leader, Ali Khamenei. In response, in 1995, David Hassan Abbasi removed "Hassan" from his name and also adopted the Persian name Siyavash Awesta

However, despite the massive publicity surrounding this worldwide lie and slander—fueled by the financing of numerous television and radio programs constantly discussing this fabricated terrorist character—many people, including friends and even close family members of David Abbasi, believed in this propaganda. This caused distress among his relatives, who contacted him to express their concerns.

Since 1980, the Iranian mullahs have constantly tried to falsify David Abbasi's work and identity.

Islamists have promoted their false imitation of Hassan Abbasi, who appeared several times a week on Iranian state television, as well as on Persian-speaking channels that claimed to be opposition media in Los Angeles. He provided his analyses and pro-Islamist, anti-Western, and anti-Semitic ideas. (www.aparat.com/v/g812qs7)

According to documents revealed by Iranian intelligence services, the Islamic Republic of Iran has financed several million dollars to spread the speeches and messages of this fake Abbasi, along with numerous television broadcasts worldwide, through Persian-language media based in Los Angeles for several years.

The fabrication of this fake persona was aimed at destroying the image and career of David Abbasi—the Franco-Persian philosopher, writer, and historian living in Paris, who has written over 140 books and 3,000 articles published in dozens of newspapers, along with more than 5,000 radio and television broadcasts aired on numerous international channels, including TV5, Al Arabiya, Pars TV, Azadi TV, Mehr TV, Al Hadath, I24News, Persian CNN, Ici & Maintenant, Radio Paris, RT, Radio Israel, Radio Tehran, and Mehr TV.

This slander campaign caused significant damage to David Abbasi.

Jean-Pierre Ellali :

Many writers and thinkers from around the world have written extensively about the works and thoughts of "Siavash Awesta" David Abbasi.

Among them is Mr. Jean-Pierre Ellali, a renowned writer and university professor in France whose works are recognized worldwide. He has written detailed articles on the work and efforts of David Abbasi "Siavash Awesta:

David Abbasi is a polyglot who masters several languages...." For 43 years, David has faced numerous attempts by fundamentalists to silence him.

Fundamentalist forgers have used his name and were mentioned in the media...<http://awesta.fr/3.pdf>

A lookalike of David Abbasi was even created... <http://www.avairan.com/abasiran/hassan-abbassi.htm>

They even created groups with the exact same name as his association and his radio station...

Moreover, the wife of the security officer of the Islamic Embassy in Paris founded an association called "Soleil de Perse"....

There are many examples of these frauds perpetrated by fundamentalists...

Due to all this fraud, David was forced to change the name of his association and radio station several times.

Since 2011, ACFP, ACFP, and ILP have been renamed "Institut Awesta." www.Awesta.fr

Since 2020, David Abbasi and his daughter Morgane have been chosen among the three leaders of the association Radio Ici et Maintenant...

In the year 2000, he founded Mehr TV, which broadcasts satellite programs worldwide via Telstar and HotBird satellites. (And again, to mislead David's friends, today you can find more than five channels named Mehr TV only on YouTube.)...

About 3,000 of his programs are also available online: www.youtube.com/MehrTv/videos

In 1990, David Abbasi invented the Mithraic calendar, from the year 7700, which he publishes annually. We are currently in the year 7761 = 2023 according to this calendar.

On this subject, he has written three books in English, French, and Persian... www.Aria7000.net

David Abbasi has received several honors for his work, including recognition from the Academy of Arts, Sciences, and Letters.

He was also awarded the Gold Plaque of the Grand Prix Humanitaire de France and received the Gold Medal of Merit and French Devotion...

Many international figures have also written articles in his favor, including Senator Henri Caillavet, considered the father of modern French secularism, who wrote a preface for his book titled Women and Wars in Political Islam.

"The five Presidents of the French Republic, as well as Prime Ministers, ministers, and members of Parliament, have always admired and encouraged the writings and works of David Abbasi. His expertise in Islamology, his critique of political Islam, his contribution to understanding political issues related to Islam, and his commitment to promoting secularism and intercultural dialogue have been praised by the highest political authorities in the country. His dedication to freedom of expression and the promotion of democratic values has resonated with leaders in France and around the world, who recognize the significance of his intellectual and cultural contributions." <http://davidawesta.blogspot.com/2021/04/prix-medailles-et-doctorats.html>

Work and business from a young age while studying

David Abbasi « Siyavash Awesta », heir to a seven-thousand-year-old family tradition, embarked on his economic endeavors in his teenage years while continuing his studies. At the age of 14, he became a journalist and newspaper editor.

By 17, he was the night manager of the Tehran Hotel in Mashhad. The following year, at 18, he founded and directed the Wienerwald music club in Mashhad.

However, due to pressure and attacks from fundamentalists, a police officer was stationed at his office every night by order of Mr. Valian, the governor of Khorasan.

In 1978, he managed the Green Leaf restaurant, and in 1978, he founded and became the editor-in-chief of Ershad magazine.

After the 1979 Islamic Revolution, due to his profession as a writer and journalist and his critiques of theocracy and political Islam, he was forced to leave his homeland. At that time, he owned five successful businesses, but after his departure, all his assets and his newspaper were confiscated by the Islamic regime. His father and several of his companions were killed or executed during those tragic years.

After two years of studying history in Beirut and Damascus, where he mastered the Arabic language, he emigrated to Paris. There, he officially and legally worked as a photographer in front of the Eiffel Tower.

At the same time, he registered the newspapers Ershad, Atwal, Homa, and Shahr Farang in various languages at the National Library of France and continued his work as a writer, journalist, and educator.

In Paris, he founded the Étoile publishing house, along with four boutiques in the capital, to publish books and promote advancements in computing in France.

From 1984 to the present day, he has been the founder and director of the Avesta Institute, a cultural center located at 66 Champs-Élysées, Paris.

He also established the Fax Service, as well as a computer-assisted advertising and publishing service, in addition to stores specializing in reprography and the publication of advertisements with television programs. For these innovations, he has received numerous distinctions, including awards, medals, badges, and diplomas from the French Senate and various academies.

In parallel, he founded several restaurants in Paris, including:

- Persépolis & Assiette Impériale & Chez Esther & Club Bonaparte

Since 1984, he has also been a board member and one of the key programmers of the French-speaking FM station Ici et Maintenant, RadioParis.net, and the Persian radio station Avai Iran.

David Abbasi, as a French citizen, has always been actively involved in the country's political and legislative life by participating in all elections and voting consistently.

Awards, Medals, badges, and diplomas of honor

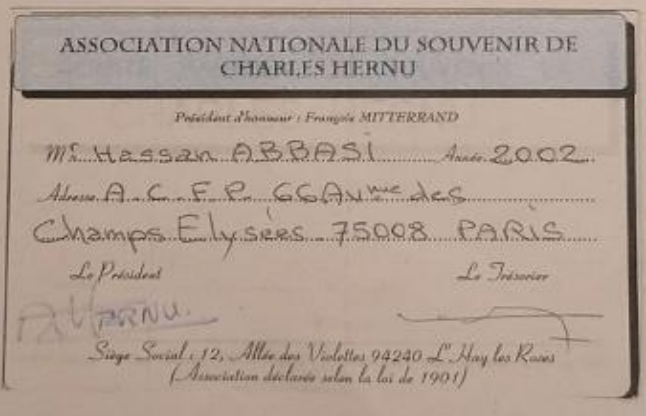

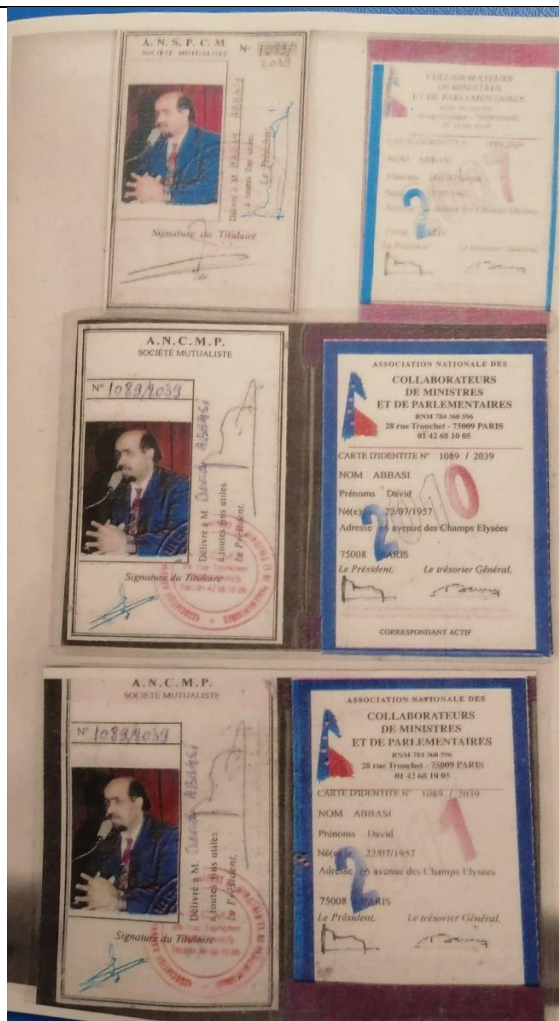

In recognition of his efforts and innovations in the economic, cultural, and artistic fields, as well as his numerous initiatives and creativity in global politics, along with his humanitarian and anti-racist commitments, David Abbasi has received various awards and medals from the French Senate, the Parliament, and the French Center for Human Rights.

- Mérite et Dévouement Français — 2003- Gold Medal
